

SOCIETY

November is the month of all others for hunting in Virginia, and the coming in of the hunting season makes one of the great joys of country life at this time of the year.

The summer girl and the Horse Show girl of 1908 have chafed and coquetted and ridden their way into the hearts of their masculine admirers, but they need to look well to their honors, when the hunting season comes into the field. Immaculately gotten up in a Norfolk jacket and short skirt of tweed in invisible plaids, or Oxford gray, with stout little boots and baskins made of chamois skin or soft leather, with a soft, close-fitting hunting cap to match the suit, holding a cluster of scarlet or brown wings, or both, by way of ornamentation; with clean, shining flowing piece and the other necessary accoutrements of the chase—in such wise the maid "who will a hunting go," is a pleasant and an irresistible object for a man's eyes to rest upon.

This maid is such a comrade, reasons out the masculine mind, while the man to whom the mind belongs keeps step beside the maid across brown stubble, behind the dogs, and notes the precision of aim with which the maid brings down the birds and squirrels, and fills the up-to-date game bag that a brown-faced, rood-humored pickaninny carries, slung over his shoulder.

After a while when a halt is made beside a little bustling stream, and the maid shows herself an adept at serving and sharing the hunting luncheon for which the other members of the party have assembled, the man concludes that he would prefer of all things to inaugurate an open air system of housekeeping, with exercise sauce as an appetizer, the system to go on indefinitely, eating sandwiches, cheese and pickles, with apples and sparkling cider for dessert.

The hunting is not by any means limited to birds and squirrels. Wild turkeys come in for no small share of attention, and if the hunting maid could choose the time when, more than any other she seems attractive, it is when behind a "turkey blind." She shows her first symptom of nervousness and needs the encouragement which a man's greater experience must supply. A Richmond girl who is a celebrated marksman, exhibits as one of her proudest trophies, a turkey beard, taken from a sixteen pound wild gobbler, which she shot last season.

The pleasures of fox hunting, which were keenly enjoyed by many of the colonial belles of Virginia, famed as hunting women, are being taken up by their twentieth century descendants, many of whom belong to the country clubs, where the meets are held regularly during the autumn and winter. The hunt is usually preceded by a breakfast, offering an opportunity for very pretty hospitality to the maid, who is again an image of correct attire in her native riding gown and boots. When she is mounted and, with a view halo! the dash is made, she skims along as lightly as a bird, she and her horse in perfect accord about gaining and holding the lead. The man looks on, then races after her and has the pleasure of seeing the blush and smile with which she receives the brush when wary Reynard is at last captured. Better than all then, is the leisurely ride home, the horses going at their own sweet will, the riders talking about a thousand things of interest, while the man thinks how lovely bright brown tresses in becoming disarray look, and wonder why everything has taken on a new element of beauty and interest.

Probably the maddest, merriest form of hunting is undertaken at night, with the flare of many torches as an accompaniment, the yelping of dogs, the comments of dusky torchmen and the cutting down of trees in which an opossum or a coon has taken refuge.

The maid needs her thickest boots and her most substantial hunting array for such a midnight frolic. She must be prepared to climb fences, cross creeks, and boggy places, walk through underbrush and over fallen logs without stumbling. She must not mind the tedious order of the faint torches, or be frightened at the yelping dogs.

Above all, she must stand well out of the reach of the falling tree, when it comes crashing down.

Then, with four or five grinning opossums, or a live coon or two, she must be prepared to make her hiveliness last through the homeward tramp, and, until good-nights are cheerily spoken, when home is reached.

If the hunting maid can do all this, and do it well, she need fear no opposition, for she will hold her own with many a man, unrivalled by maids of other ilk.

Carnel--Vaughan.

Invitations have been issued by Mrs. James Thomas Vaughan for the marriage of her daughter, Mable, to Mr. James Thomas Carnel.

The ceremony will be performed Wednesday, November 11th, at 6:30 P. M., in the parlors of Mrs. J. Frank Sinton, the sister of Miss Vaughan, who has her apartments at the Plaza Hotel, Baltimore.

The Rev. W. B. Beauchamp, of Broad Street Methodist Church, this city, will officiate.

The young couple will be at home after December 16th, at the Chesterfield.

The bride-elect is strikingly handsome and a great social favorite, as well as a Richmond belle. Mr. Carnel is an alumnus of the University of Virginia, a member of the real estate firm of J. D. Carnel & Son, and an enterprising young business gentleman, who counts his Richmond friends by the score.

Spencer--Coalter.

A beautiful autumn wedding will be celebrated at 6 P. M. next Wednesday, November 4th, in the First Baptist Church, when Miss Amelia Drowry Coalter becomes the bride of Mr. Branch Flournoy Spencer, of St. Louis. The Rev. Dr. George Cooper, the pastor of the church, will be the celebrant. Artistic altar decorations will be in palms, silver candelabra and white tapers. Professor Watson will play the wedding marches, and, during the ceremony, Rubenstein's "Thou art like unto a flower."

The bride, a lovely young girl of the brunette type, will enter with her brother, Mr. H. St. John Coalter. She will be gown in white crepe de chine, worn above accordion plaited liberty silk, and trimmed with shirring and chiffon. Her veil will be fastened by a diamond crescent, an heirloom of her family, and she will carry a shower of lilies of the valley.

She will be attended by two of the handsomest young matrons in Richmond, Mrs. H. St. John Coalter and Mrs. Henry Heth Vaden, as her dames of honor, and by Miss Maude McCaw Patterson, who will officiate as maid of honor.

Mrs. Coalter and Mrs. Vaden will have exquisite toilets of white lace over pink, with applique of pink velvet roses. Their bouquets will be Madame Testout roses.

The maid of honor will look charming in a dainty frock of pink plaid, with a big cluster of La France roses.

The bridesmaids, Miss Nellie Hood, of Culpeper; Miss Annie Gwathmey, of King William; Miss Constance Tritton and Miss Caroline Vaden, will be in white organdy, trimmed profusely with lace.

and having point d'esprit sashes. They will have armfuls of white Japanese chrysanthemums.

Mr. Herbert Spencer, of San Antonio, Texas, the brother of the groom, will be the best man. Groomsman will include: Mr. Randolph Tucker Coalter, Mr. Samuel A. Patterson, Mr. George E. Gregory, Mr. Thomas A. Spencer, Mr. Philip Carleton, Mr. Frank Grigg, Mr. John Burke and Mr. Willie C. Pulliam.

Among the guests from a distance to attend the wedding will be Dr. and Mrs. Edward Magruder, of Charlottesville; Mrs. E. R. Spencer, the mother of the groom; Mr. Herbert Spencer, of San Antonio, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, of Danville, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. George H. Burke, of Rumford;

November 11th, at 6 P. M., in St. Stephen's Church, Culpeper.

The announcement is one of widespread interest, Miss Rixey being the niece of Congressman Rixey and having an extensive acquaintance in Richmond. Mr. Stearns is a member of the Richmond bar and a grandson of the late Franklin Stearns, who for many years was prominently known in Richmond and Virginia.

When Mr. Stearns and his bride return from a Northern tour they will have rooms with Mrs. S. W. Travers, on West Franklin Street.

The Right Rev. Bishop A. Van de Vyver, assisted by the Rev. Father A. K. Gwynn, of Greenville, S. C., and the Rev. Father Joseph Magli, of the Cathedral, will officiate at the wedding of Miss Mary Louise O'Connor, to Colonel John Murphy next Wednesday at 10:30 A. M., in St. Peter's Cathedral.

The bride and groom will be attended by Mr. Edmund Hamilton O'Connor, of Savannah, Ga.; Mr. John Murphy, Jr., of John E. Murphy and Mr. Eric Boudar. After the wedding Colonel Murphy and his bride will take a Northern tour. Miss O'Connor, who is a sister of Mrs. H. L. Clinton Boudar, of Richmond, is a daughter of the late William Edmund O'Connor, of Charleston, S. C., who served during the Civil War in Hampton's Legion, and was wounded at Gettysburg. She is connected through her mother, Mrs. Louise Trumbo O'Connor, with the Maryland families of Trumbo and Selman.

Colonel Murphy is known first as a gallant ex-Confederate and second as a most successful and popular hotel proprietor.

Enthusiastic Meeting.

An enthusiastic meeting of the George Washington Memorial Association was held at Rauscher's, in Washington, D. C., Friday last, Mrs. Decatur Axtell, chairman of the Committee of Richmond, being present.

At this meeting hearty concurrence in the continuation of the work was unanimously decided upon. New plans for future development were presented for consideration, and a strong committee was appointed to canvass these plans and report at the annual meeting to be held December 14th.

Mrs. Charles Washington Coleman, of Williamsburg, Va., is the president of the Virginia branch of the association.

The Richmond Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, will meet in Lee Camp Hall, November 4th, at 4 o'clock.

A report of the Norfolk convention will be made. The meeting is changed from the second Wednesday of the month in order to have delegates instructed for the Charleston, S. C., convention to be held November 11th.

Monday Musicals.

The musicale at the Woman's Club tomorrow afternoon promises to be most enjoyable, as the programme will be rendered by excellent musicians.

Miss Elizabeth Armstrong Taylor, of Norfolk, and Miss Elsie Aylott Cofer, of Norfolk, who are always cordially welcomed by Richmond audiences, Miss Virginia Roper, also of Norfolk, has never been heard at the club, but she makes her first appearance with the reputation of being an accomplished musician, and a most charming pianist, whose compositions are favorably known in the musical world.

Both Miss Taylor and Miss Roper are the guests of Miss Louise Williams, the chairman of the day.

An engagement of much interest to relatives and friends in Richmond, is that of Miss Alice H. Robinson, of Providence, R. I., the daughter of the late E. A.

MISS ELSIE COUNCIL, OF DANVILLE.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Garrett, of St. Louis, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Thompson Brown, of "Blairfield," near Bedford City.

Miss Coalter, who is exceedingly popular in Richmond society, and has been a belle during the season succeeding her debut, is the daughter of Mrs. and the late St. George Tucker Coalter, and the niece of Major Clay Drowry, of this city, and the late Augustus H. Drowry, of Westover.

As the great-granddaughter of Judge John Coalter, of the Court of Appeals, and the great-grandniece of John Randolph, Miss Coalter is closely connected with many of the oldest and most prominent Virginia families.

Mr. Spencer is also a Virginian, belonging to a well known Charlotte county branch of the Spencer family. He occupies an excellent position in St. Louis, where he has been successful in business, and where he is identified with the leading clubs and other social organizations of that metropolis.

Invitations have been received in Richmond from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones Rixey, of Brandy, Culpeper county, Va., for the marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth Herndon, to Mr. E. Willey Stearns, of this city.

The wedding will take place Wednesday, entertained Friday afternoon by Mrs. Walter A. Montgomery at her beautiful home in West Raleigh. Papers were read by Mrs. T. H. Briggs on "Great Men of to-day in Germany," by Mrs. K. P. Battle, Jr., on "Present Royal Family—Court of Berlin," and by Mrs. F. L. Stevens on "Museums of Berlin." Elegant refreshments were served.

BLACKSTONE.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) BLACKSTONE, VA., Oct. 31.—There has been but little transpiring in the local world here this week, but there are rumors of early marriages, and their effects to be announced later. The chief thing of interest this week is the dining given by Miss Mattie Ardy to a few of her friends on Friday, and which was greatly enjoyed by them. The culinary reputation of the Black and her mother and her easy manner of entertaining always make her invitations greatly sought after and gratefully accepted.

W. A. R. Adams has returned from a bit to her daughter, Mrs. W. B. Coe, of Sussex county.

And Mrs. J. D. Crawley attended the marriage of the latter's sister, near Fayetteville, this week.

A white ribbon society was given by a ladies of the W. C. T. U. at the home of the president, Mrs. W. E. Garritin Friday evening for the benefit of the needy members. It proved a very enjoyable event.

Misses N. M. Nebbett and W. E. Hurlbert a few days in Richmond this week.

Miss Louise Budd who has been visiting this in Richmond since the Horse Show returned to her home here on Friday night.
